Business Advocates

What is a Business Advocate?

Advocates are community leaders who volunteer to meet with people interested in relocating or starting a business in Fort Bragg. Advocates take entrepreneurs on a tour of Fort Bragg tailored to your business interests and are available to provide insights and information about the City as a place to do business.

The grand tour

Whether starting a retail, industrial, or service-oriented business, Advocates can show you around to the best spots for retail, commercial and industrial businesses. They'll tailor the tour to your interests.

What's it like to live and work here?

Ask an Advocate about Fort Bragg. Besides knowing about all the tourism attractions and regional events, Advocates have the inside skinny on the pulse of the local business climate, the region's workforce, housing and real estate trends, retail sales trends, upcoming development projects, and more.

What resources are available for local businesses?

Advocates can refer you to public agencies and business organizations that will help you further with starting, expanding, or relocating a new business.

Demographic information

Advocates share information that people need to make crucial decisions about starting a business in Fort Bragg including Census data, retail trends, and workforce demographics.

How do I get in touch with a Business Advocate?

Contact the City's Community Development Department staff. They'll put you in touch with an available Advocate that specializes in your type of business.
